The first thing that I saw when I came to the city was a great many people who were very poor and very dirty. They were all of different colors and they were all of different religions. They were all of different languages and they were all of different customs. They were all of different ways of life and they were all of different minds. They were all of different hearts and they were all of different souls. They were all of different kinds of people and they were all of different ways of thinking.
