1. The first part of the text discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice to ensure transparency and accountability.

2. The second part of the text outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies between the recorded amounts and the actual cash received. It suggests that such differences should be investigated immediately to identify the cause, whether it be a clerical error or a more serious issue.

3. The third part of the text provides guidelines for the periodic reconciliation of the accounts. It states that the books should be balanced at the end of each month, and any variances should be explained and corrected before the next period begins.

4. The final part of the text concludes by stating that these procedures are essential for the smooth operation of the business and for the protection of its financial interests. It encourages all staff to adhere strictly to these guidelines.

The first of these is the fact that the population of the country is rapidly increasing. This is due to a number of causes, the most important of which

De la nature et des propriétés de l'air

On a vu par l'expérience que l'air est un corps étendu, pesant, et qui se dilate par le feu, et se contracte par le froid. On a vu aussi que l'air est composé de plusieurs parties, et que ces parties sont différentes de celles qui composent le feu, et le terre, et l'eau.

On a vu encore que l'air est un corps élastique, et que sa élasticité est la cause de sa dilatation, et de sa contraction.

On a vu enfin que l'air est un corps qui se dilate, et se contracte, et qui se dilate, et se contracte, et qui se dilate, et se contracte.

L'air est un corps simple, composé de particules subtiles et mobiles, qui se meuvent en tous sens, et se dilatent & se contractent, selon le plus & le moins de chaleur qu'il reçoit. Il est le plus commun de tous les corps, & se trouve partout, & est nécessaire à la vie de tous les animaux. Il est aussi le plus subtil de tous les corps, & se mêle avec tous les autres. Il est le plus léger de tous les corps, & se dilate par la chaleur, & se contracte par le froid.
